Southampton Liberal Democrats ready for General Election

Southampton Liberal Democrats have selected David Goodall to fight the Southampton Itchen seat and Steve Sollitt for the Southampton Test seat at the General Election, expected in May.

David Goodall, 42, who works at Roke Manor Research, developing the next generation of communication systems, is a school Governor at Townhill Infants and lives in West End with his wife and their two children.

David said, "I am extremely pleased to be the candidate for Southampton Itchen, it is an area I have known all my life. I started school at Glenfield Infants and my grandad worked at Vospers for many years."

Steve Sollitt, 34, who has worked at Southampton General Hospital for two and half years and lives in Maybush has been a candidate in the last two elections for the party.

Steve said, "I am looking forward to working with the Liberal Democrat councillors across our city to offer a real choice to the electorate in Southampton Test at the next election. We have the largest number of councillors in the Test constituency and are making real progress now that we are running the council too."

More about both candidates can be found at www.davidgoodall.org.uk and www.sollitt.org.uk respectively.
